Biography
It is rare to meet someone who actually loves what they do for a living. I happen to be one of those people. I love watching the people I work with take ownership over their lives by coming to therapy to work on a specific issue or just to have someone to talk to. I especially love working with relationship issues as I have found that most people have, at some point in their lives, encountered a problematic relationship.

Training/Certifications
I have had specialized training in couples therapy and suicide management.

Theoretical Orientation
I enjoy working as a psychodynamic therapist because it allows me to go deeper with each person I work with. My approach is to first meet the client where they are then help them explore their growth area by discovering the roots of the problem.

Biography
I have worked with many people engaged in challenging and often creative goals who are having difficulties with relationships, achievement, depression, anxiety, sustained attention, or emotional concerns. My Ph.D. is in Clinical Psychology (with minors in Qualitative Psychology and Movement Psychotherapy) from UCLA. As a former Human Relations Advisor for Caltech, Director of the Counseling Center of Occidental College, and Consultant for Loyola Law School, and as a Supervisor for Interns at the Los Angeles Gay and Lesbian Center, and in private practice I have provided and taught psychotherapy for over 25 years. I also teach Sport Psychology at SMC and practice Mindfulness. I use eclectic psychotherapy and Psychological Skills Training to promote peak performance for athletes, scientists, lawyers, executives, artists, and others looking to not only recover from past and current challenges but to maximize their achievement and quality of life.

Training/Certifications

Theoretical Orientation
I use a very eclectic approach informed by systems theory, attachment theory, object relations, cognitive behavioral approaches, humanism, feminism and mindfulness. I am actively present and processing with clients. I work well with ‘outliers’, whose experience, abilities or thinking is not typical. I promote the contributions of exercise to mental, emotional and physical wellbeing and performance. I value multicultural perspectives!

Biography

work from an interpersonal frame of reference and use a variety of techniques including cognitive behavioral approaches in my work with adult individuals and with couples. I work with clients in identifying and changing patterns in their lives that no longer work for them in an effort to help them achieve greater happiness, peace, and balance in their professional and personal lives. I believe in people's ability to change and take charge of their own lives. The therapy relationship not only provides objective reflection and a sounding board for issues, but itself can be healing as clients become more aware of how they operate in relationships and explore healthier ways of connecting. Biography
The pace of life is fast and it can feel increasingly hard to balance all of life’s demands. Therefore, it’s important to feel like you are investing your limited time and resources in someone that you trust in that can provide you insight, guidance and tools for change. Many times, the methods of coping that used to work in the past may no longer feel like they are working for you now. I strive to help you to identify your triggers, self-sabotaging behaviors, and untapped areas of strength. I have experience working with Caltech students and understand many of the academic and social struggles and adjustment during this pivotal time in your life. My specialties include helping to cope with life transitions, anxiety, depression, work-life balance, social skills training, cross-cultural issues, parent relationship conflicts, and partner relationship issues. I welcome working with undergraduate students, graduate students, couples, and women's groups.

Biography
I view therapy as transformation through relationship - a safe haven where exploration, development and change can take place. Therapy can be utilized whether or not you are experiencing severe distress, have a curiosity about you and your world, or are finding yourself unsatisfied with your current relationships, or circumstances. I have extensive clinical experience in treating the following mental health issues in children and adults: depression, anxiety, trauma, grief and loss. It is important to take care of yourself and if we are a good fit, we can make sure you get what you need.

Biography
Herman & Associates was founded in 1988 and provides counseling and psychodiagnostic assessments for children, adolescents, and adults. Our experienced team of licensed professionals assist individuals, couples, and families in southern California with developmental, educational, attentional, emotional, and transition challenges throughout the life span. Our practice involves three components: assessment, therapy, and professional consultations.

Training/Certifications
I have a multidisciplinary team of professionals and we have over 30 years of experience with psychodiagnostic assessment (e.g., ADHD, Learning Disabilities, Autistic Spectrum Disorders, depressive disorders, anxiety disorders, etc.).

Theoretical Orientation
My theoretical orientation is not easy to describe because it is a culmination of all my readings and experiences in psychology, research, education, child development, and philosophy. At the heart, I am a developmentalist who works with children, adolescents, and adults. I tend to conceptualize cases from a complex model that incorporates family history, birth and developmental history, psychosocial history, academic history, medical history, and psychiatric history. I believe in the premise of the psychodynamic model that early childhood relationship experiences are very powerful and initially shape who we are and how we approach the world. I believe that chronic unstable or inconsistent parenting greatly impacts an individual's ability to trust themselves and others, and form deep meaningful interpersonal connections with others. While parents have the greatest impact on the formulation of self and object relations, I have seen that healing and stabilizing experiences can come from a variety of other sources (e.g., other family members, teachers, mentors, coaches, significant others, therapists).

Biography
Thank you for reviewing my profile. I started my career working at a private psychiatric hospital and worked with many clients in extreme situations. It was during this time that I studied DBT as a new therapy to help troubled clients. I transitioned to the eating disorder unit and was eventually offered the directorship which I gladly accepted. I was able to build up a private practice in Pasadena and left the hospital a few years back in order to focus on my practice. I enjoy my work, and while I certainly am still challenged by my clients, it is always a joy to meet the challenge and help each other grow in the desired direction.

Training/Certifications
DBT skills certified and Eating Disorder Specialist certified

Theoretical Orientation
I am Adlerian with DBT influence. I am collaborative with my clients and work towards validation and acceptance in order to facilitate change.

Biography
In my work with the Caltech community, I specialize in helping students, faculty, and researchers work through stressful and difficult situations related to their workplace, including understanding difficult relationships in the many complex dynamics, dealing with high expectations by self and others, and cultivating a strong sense of self for one's career and personal life. I also work with men who have difficulties expressing themselves or who struggle with sexual addictions. In addition to my training in psychotherapy, my undergraduate degree from MIT gives me a scientific mindset for understanding the Caltech community.

He received his Ph.D. from the clinical psychology program at UCLA (2003), completed his pre-doctoral fellowship at Richmond Area Multi-Services (RAMS) - National Asian American Psychology Training Center, and completed a clinical-research postdoctoral fellowship at Harbor UCLA Medical Center. His research focuses on understanding and reducing mental health disparities, psychotherapy process and outcomes, and improving therapist cultural competency and effectiveness when working with people from different background. He was awarded the American Psychological Association Minority Fellowship Program Early Career Award, the Asian American Psychological Association Early Career Award and inducted as a Fellow, and the Enrico E. Jones Award for Research in Psychotherapy and Clinical Psychology by the Western Psychological Association and inducted as a Fellow. He is also a licensed clinical psychologist and has an independent practice in Pasadena and Claremont, California.

Training/Certifications
Level I training in Gottman Method Couples Therapy

Theoretical Orientation
He has been trained in a variety of psychotherapy methods, and tailors his treatment approach based on the characteristics of the client and the type of problem his clients are experiencing. He takes a culturally effective approach to integrating cognitive-behavioral, psychodynamic/analytic, and solution-focused modalities to help improve his client’s lives. He is also adept in structural and strategic family therapy, and has also completed Level I training in Gottman Method Couples Therapy. Dr. Hwang can also work within one modality (e.g., CBT or psychodynamic) if that’s what the client prefers. He utilizes an evidence-based approach to providing mental health services.

Biography
I am a licensed clinical psychologist with a PhD from Fuller Graduate School of Psychology. I also hold bachelor's and master's degrees in nutrition from Cornell and UNC-Chapel Hill, completed my psychology internship at a VA Medical Center, postdoctoral training in Cognitive Behavioral Therapy at Harbor UCLA Medical Center, and have been an adjunct professor of Health Psychology. I believe that deep listening and empathy are foundational for self-understanding and change, and utilize principles of psychology to help people gain awareness of and change underlying patterns of thinking, feeling, and behaving that hold them back from living life to its fullest potential.

Training/Certifications
I completed postdoctoral training in Cognitive Behavioral and Dialectical Behavior Therapy at Harbor-UCLA. I am also a Registered Dietitian.

Theoretical Orientation
First and foremost, my approach is centered in providing a sense of safety and deep empathy for my clients. After that, my approach is generally cognitive-behavioral and DBT-informed, but I also draw on psychodynamic approaches when needed to enhance client insight and change.

Biography
Adrienne Meier, Ph.D., is a licensed clinical psychologist (PSY27471) who specializes in the treatment and assessment of anxiety, depression, and thought disorders. In individual therapy, Dr. Meier utilizes Cognitive Behavioral-based (CBT) interventions focused on the connection between thoughts and feelings to improve overall psychological functioning. Therapy groups are also available, which aim to assist students in developing social skills, improving relationships, and coping with stress. In addition, Dr. Meier conducts psychological and cognitive assessments in order to identify obstacles to academic success, which may include unknown psychiatric symptoms, attentional difficulties (ADHD), or learning disabilities. Please contact Dr. Meier to inquire further about services available and how she can help you reach your goals.

Training/Certifications
Licensed Psychologist (PSY27471)

Theoretical Orientation
My approach to therapy involves Cognitive Behavioral-based (CBT) interventions to identify core beliefs, automatic thoughts, as well as the connection between thoughts and feelings, in order to then restructure maladaptive thoughts. In addition, I meet the client where they are by first equipping them with the skills necessary to manage stress and overwhelming emotions so they can effectively participate in CBT exercises. In addition, I also conduct psychological evaluations in order to assess for and identify potential barriers to their success at CalTech and will provide recommendations as to how these issues can be addressed so they can thrive.

Biography
Dr. Novello earned a degree in psychology at Columbia University in two and a half years and graduated with honors and distinction. She completed her M.A. and Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology at the California School of Professional Psychology in Los Angeles, an American Psychological Association approved doctoral program. As part of her clinical training, she completed a clerkship, a practicum, two half-time internships, a full-time APA approved internship with the Federal Bureau, a Board of Psychology approved Psychological Assistantship, and a postdoctoral year as a Registered Psychologist. She has been licensed by the State of California as a Clinical Psychologist since 2005. Dr. Novello has broad clinical and assessment experience with adults, children, couples, and families. She has trained in a variety of settings including private practice, medical, forensic, community clinic, and student counseling center. She has been working with Caltech students since 2001.

Training/Certifications
I was a pre-doctoral intern at Caltech, which gave me a lot of insight into the gifted student population.

Theoretical Orientation
I have an integrative approach and draw on different psychological approaches during the course of therapy. I am flexible in providing the type of treatment that is best suited to each individual client, whether that is long-term psychodynamic treatment, short-term cognitive-behavioral therapy, or single sessions for consultation and assistance in problem-solving on a particular issue. Therapy is a cooperative endeavor and I develop treatment goals together with the client to attain relief of symptoms, find solutions to specific problems, increase insight, or improve relationships. I strive to provide a safe space in which clients can experience uncritical acceptance in order to explore their thoughts, emotions, and behaviors. Through focused attention and empathy, I hope to promote self-understanding and to be a consistent and understanding presence in their lives. I especially enjoy working with the Caltech population.

Biography

Maria Y. Oh, Ph.D. is a licensed clinical psychologist with a private practice in Pasadena. She has her M.Ed. in Counselor Education from University of Virginia and her Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology from California School of Professional Psychology, Los Angeles with a multicultural emphasis. Dr. Oh has over 20 years of clinical experience helping young adults overcome a wide-range of social, emotional and academic difficulties. As a staff psychologist at Caltech (2002-2016), she developed an expertise working with students with Autism Spectrum Disorders and has specialized in helping students with social anxiety, social skills development, and relational difficulties. Coming from a strong cross-cultural background, Dr. Oh has extensive experience working with international student population and addressing Asian, and Asian American college mental health concerns. Since 1991, Dr. Oh has served as a consultant and consultant trainer for local, state, and national organizations addressing mental health needs of Asian and Pacific Islander communities.

Training/Certifications

Theoretical Orientation

My orientation to therapy is integrative, and I draw on a combination of psychodynamic, relational, developmental and cognitive-behavioral approaches as well as my own clinical experiences with clients over the years. I believe that change and growth comes from having emotional and relational experiences with others and helping clients develop meaningful relationships is at the heart of my work.

Biography
I have enjoyed working with Caltech students, faculty and staff for twenty-five years. I work with individuals who have mood and anxiety related concerns, transition or loss issues, or histories with trauma and difficult families. I also enjoy seeing international students and clients with medical needs.

Training/Certifications

Theoretical Orientation
My framework includes psychodynamic, family systems and cognitive-behavioral theory and interventions. I approach my work with clients as an active collaboration in which we define therapy goals and develop a deeper understanding of their circumstances and options.

Biography
For over 20 years I have had the privilege of working with adults and couples and have been effective in helping with a wide range of issues; depression, anxiety, self esteem, relationships, stress, family of origin issues, identity, grief/loss and addictions. My background includes working as a staff psychologist at CSUN and Caltech. I value understanding the significant relationships in one's life including one's relationship to oneself and how those dynamics contribute to who you are today. Above all, I value empathic attunement and seek to provide a safe, caring, non-judgemental place for healing and growth.

Biography
Dr. Stevenson completed an American Psychological Association (APA)-Accredited Internship at the Federal Medical Center in Boston, Massachusetts. She also completed an APA-Accredited Post-Doctoral fellow at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center. During her fellowship she was trained in third-wave cognitive behavioral therapies including Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT), Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT), and Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT). Dr. Stevenson’s clinical focus has been to use cognitive-behavioral therapy for the treatment of a wide range of anxiety, mood, and depressive disorders, including obsessive compulsive disorder, social anxiety, panic disorder, depression, and issues related to self-esteem and body image. Dr. Stevenson also has extensive specialized experience with the CBT treatment of anger control issues, and the assessment, diagnosis, and treatment of substance abuse and addiction. Additionally, Dr. Stevenson has extensive specialized experience in psychological testing and assessments, including diagnostic clarification, personality and neurocognitive testing, ADHD, and learning disability evaluations.

Training/Certifications
Postdoctoral fellowship focused on provision of Cognitive Behavioral Therapy

Theoretical Orientation
I approach my work with clients from a cognitive-behavioral perspective and look at the interplay between their thought patterns, behaviors, and emotions. Helping them understand such a cycle empowers my clients to use newly acquired skills to create change and understanding in their life. I approach my work with clients as two members of the same team, both of us working together to help them reach their goals. I believe that a goodness of fit between a client and therapist is integral to treatment and I make sure to take the time to connect with each individual and create a safe space for healing. Although my work with psychological testing is different by it's nature, I approach each assessment relationship with an open curiosity and goal of creating a safe and inviting environment.

Biography

Training/Certifications
Two-year post-doctoral certification in psychoanalytic psychotherapy from the San Diego Psychoanalytic Institute

Theoretical Orientation
I practice contemporary (relational/intersubjective) psychoanalytic psychotherapy. This means I have a developmental perspective, consider the therapeutic relationship central to the work and give precedence to the client's subjective experience. Based on developmental history and diagnosis, this approach allows me to appropriate select interventions from a variety of orientations that fit the client.

Biography
My approach is collaborative and pragmatic with the aim of working through emotional pain, making meaningful changes in concept of self and others, and of promoting growth and self-discovery. I practice psychoanalysis, an intensive form of therapy: Sessions can be as frequent as two to four times a week.

Training/Certifications
Psychoanalysis

Theoretical Orientation
Contemporary psychoanalysis: Focuses on the subjective experiential world of the patient and regards the patient-therapist relationship as a source of healing and growth. It is an intensive and open ended form of therapy with the frequency of twice or more per week.
